

Adding -s and -es

The Surprise

Today, we are learning to read words that contain -s saying -es.

It was the start of the summer holidays and Kit and Sam were looking forward to having the whole of August off school. "It's so exciting," grinned Sam. "I wonder what we'll do!"

Kit and Sam could hear their Mum inside, talking to someone on the phone. She sounded very excited and was talking very fast.

“Who do you think that is?” asked Kit.

“Hmm, I’m not sure. Mum will probably tell us soon enough,” replied Sam.

Mum appeared in the back garden. “You need to pack some suitcases quickly,” she said with a grin. Kit and Sam looked puzzled. “You remember that Grandma Dadi and Grandpa Dada are going to India to meet baby Diya? Well, your Dad has managed to get us last minute tickets on the same flight! We leave tomorrow.”

-s and -es can be added to make a noun plural. This means that there is more than one. Let's try these examples together:

That evening, Grandma Dadi and Grandpa Dada came over to discuss the plan with the family. Kit and Sam were very excited as they had heard their Grandparents talk so much about the places that they grew up.

Kit and Sam were bursting with questions. “What places will we visit?” asked Sam.

“Will we eat different kinds of food?” asked Kit.

“You are so impatient,” laughed Grandma. “You’ll find out soon enough.”

Kit and Sam could not sleep that evening. Their heads were full of thoughts about their upcoming adventure. "I'd love to visit some temples," said Kit. "We were learning about them in school." "I think that I would like to ride in an auto-rickshaw," said Sam. "Grandpa Dada was talking about them. They sound cool!"

"We should get some sleep," yawned Kit.

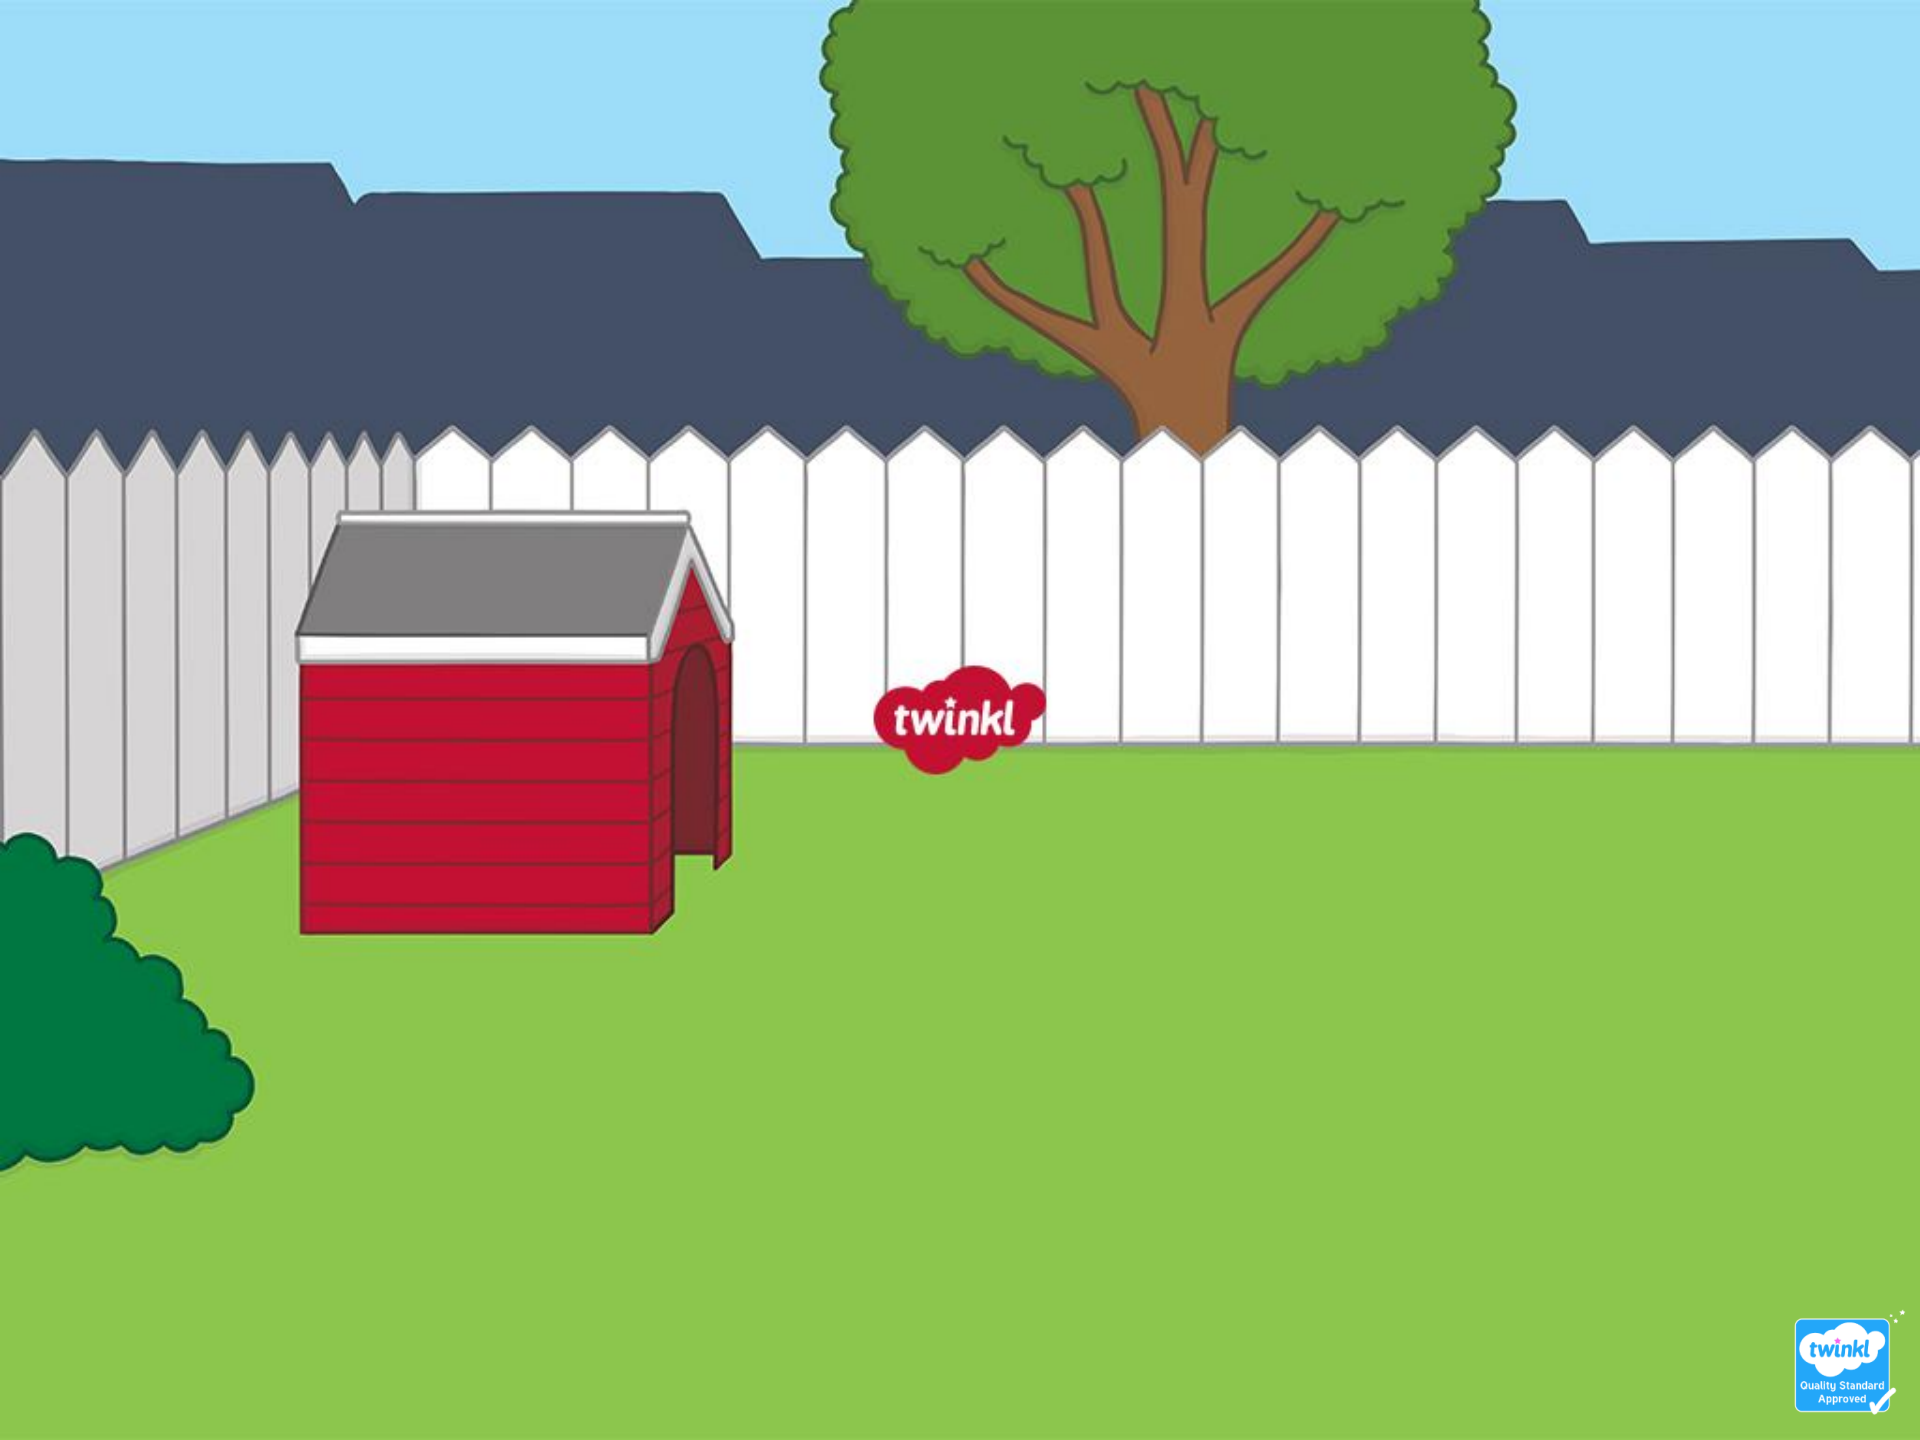

"Yes," replied Sam. "We have got a long way to travel tomorrow.
Over eight-thousand kilometres!"

"Clever clogs," laughed Kit. "Sleep well!"
